wherein the contact data received includes the contacts' information;

identifying that at least one of the contacts added to the user's instant messenger list is a temporary contact;

storing an expiration date corresponding to each of the temporary contacts; periodically comparing a current date to the expiration dates stored for the temporary contacts; and in response to the comparison, removing the contact data corresponding the temporary contacts when the expiration date has occurred.

~~prior to the reception of the contact data:~~

~~selecting the calendar entry from the user's electronic calendar; and~~

~~retrieving, from the selected calendar entry, calendar data that includes participant information for participants of the selected calendar entry; and~~

~~subsequent to the reception of the contact data:~~

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The invention as claimed. The claims 1, 9, 17, 26, 28, and 30 specially include limitations based selecting, by a user, calendar entries from an electronic calendar that corresponds to a user, wherein the selected calendar entries appear highlighted; retrieving, from each of the selected calendar entries, a plurality of contacts; and creating a plurality of buddy groups within the user's buddy list by automatically adding the plurality of contacts associated with each of the selected calendar entries to said each of the plurality of buddy groups, wherein each created group corresponds to each of the selected calendar entries, and the contacts and the buddy groups can be designated as a temporary contact and a temporary group (as defined in applicants' specification from page 12 line 1 to page 13 line 28). Although system and method for generating a list of people based on the results of the received query is firmly documented by cited prior art, the selecting, by a user, calendar entries from an electronic calendar that corresponds to a user, wherein the selected calendar entries appear highlighted; retrieving, from each of the selected
